[April-2022]

The new “HyperMotion” technology has the same behavioural trait as human players. It offers the intelligent AI system a chance to make its own decisions, unchain itself from player limitations and evolve in real-time by reacting in the most suitable manner. In FIFA 18, the intelligence of the player’s movements was caught on film and was recreated by other players who repeated the same actions. In FIFA 19, that ability went one step further by using motion capture data from the actual 22 real-life players who completed the match. With the introduction of “HyperMotion” in Fifa 22 2022 Crack, we are once again putting the player in a perfect position to shape their experience. The ability to control the game and its intelligent AI from a completely new standpoint has never been more powerful. Player Actions and Intelligence Player Actions and Intelligences The “HyperMotion” technology is built on two pillars: player actions and Player Intelligence. It’s easy to summarise: the actions of the player are recorded and then “decrypted,” or translated, by the AI that simulates the player. “Player Actions” Gone are the days of users sharing clips of their playthroughs on streams.

“HyperMotion” now allows users to share and archive their play sessions through the new GamePad function. With the GamePad function, players can play a session by recording their gameplay and share it through the growing community of users. Whenever users share their sessions, they can choose from six different options: Exhibition, Championship, League, Cup, Tournament and Online. Exhibition: For the experience of playing “on the go,” the FIFA 22 GamePad app supports the exhibition mode, which gives you the option to play matches in smaller, more compact areas. It’s also easy to share games and explore the depth of FIFA’s gameplay in the post-match. The great thing about the exhibition mode is that it can be launched from most of the modes, for instance: Championship: The Championship mode is completely transformed with the HyperMotion technology. “The perfect exhibition of the match,” as the developers called it. When in match this mode is played on a compact pitch, it’s as if the match is played in a more intimate environment.

The FIFA franchise is unique in its game engine known as FIFA GameWorks, which has powered many major improvements over the years. After many years of picking up steam, FIFA got an official major release overhaul, FIFA 20, which introduced brand new gameplay elements into the game and ushered in a new era of gameplay innovation. FIFA 21 broke new ground, introducing the World Cup Mode, which put the spotlight on the biggest sports tournament of the year. The mode reimagined the experience for fans, as well as giving gamers the ability to host and participate in tournaments. We think you'll agree that FIFA GameWorks is going from strength to strength as the guys over at EA Sports have been hard at work to bring you a truly next generation title with FIFA 22. So, without further ado, let's dive right in to what to expect when EA SPORTS FIFA 22 launches on October 11. With a host of gameplay improvements to the core system, we expect the FIFA GameWorks engine to provide a smoother and more responsive game than previous iterations. FIFA GameWorks was already impressive back in FIFA 19, so it's great to see that we are now seeing the same improvements in FIFA 21.

Changes to FIFA's Skill Stick
