"We wanted to bring FIFA 22's gameplay in line with what we're seeing on the pitch, and our goal in creating 'HyperMotion Technology' is to reduce the wait between the action and making your play," said Ruth Allison, vice president of FIFA and Mr. Tackles. "Players' movement was key in making this the best-realised version of FIFA yet, so you get to see every single tackle, every flick on the ball, it's all captured, and it's with action, in high-quality gameplay that you've never seen before." The hyperrealism of the new "HyperMotion" gameplay and zooming in on the ball and players will further enhance the game's physics engine, which prioritizes intuitive, responsive gameplay in all conditions. As part of the development cycle, fans were able to take a close look at the game's engine in FIFA Ultimate Team modes, and based on their reviews, the team saw a valuable insight into how the gameplay could be refined for a full, high-intensity experience. "We saw good and bad areas of play, and we've put extra time in to ensure the 'HyperMotion' engine feels natural and works well, while also giving players more control with ball control and improved player speed," said Dusan Beci, Chief Creative Officer. "The result is a new way of playing that combines all of the best aspects of FIFA gameplay - the unpredictability, the ball movement, the pace and speed - with the most realistic and intuitive football experience." This is the first time the popular game engine has been used to power FIFA gameplay. "We set out to create one of the best versions of FIFA ever," said Christoph Hartmann, Executive Producer. "We started with what we are seeing on the pitch, and then brought that to life in the game. Today we are proud to be showing the world a new standard in gameplay, AI and design, and we look forward to continuing to build on this." The first game update was released on September 12, 2016, which included new Live Your Goals, More Ways to Score, goal celebrations and the introduction of the All Blacks, Women's World Cup and the Netherlands. That update also enabled the camera to follow the ball in motion and the player in motion, and enabled the camera to sway

Features Key:

- Live out your dreams - Living out your pro gamer's life as both a manager and a player is brought to life with brand new Career Experiences.
- Discover and build your next team with the all-new Create-a-Club mode.
- Better FIFA gameplay, AI, player intelligence, and presentation - Gameplay is optimized for the PS4 system with more intelligence from the player's perspectives, advanced AI, smarter tactical decisions, and brand-new presentation that is designed to immerse players in the game's living-world atmosphere.
- Exceeding the hype - FIFA 22 introduces a cast of 22 Pro Legends - the top stars of the game. They'll be kicking your ass in Ultimate Team from day one. The result is more opportunities to acquire the greatest players in the world.
