Spaceslingers: Rise of a Legend is a unique, challenging, and rewarding platforming game. It mixes traditional 2D gameplay with new and innovative 3D graphics. A smooth difficulty curve lets players get to know the controls while an interesting story will keep them playing. Handicap Features: - Unbelievable variety of locations: From deserts to beaches, space stations to ruins, outer space to intergalactic levels. - Keyboard and Gamepad support. - Multiple difficulty levels, allowing players of all ages and skill levels to have a challenge. - Enchantment system. - Infinite and replayable gameplay. About The Creator Brandon Jarrell: Brandon is a software developer at the Walt Disney Imagineering company in the California bay area. He is also a part of the team at Auroch Digital, where he currently works on Spaceslingers. His love for games started at a young age, playing many retro games (TI-99/4A, Sega Genesis, Turbo Duo) with his father. In his free time he can usually be found having run into a wall, or making some new creation on his computer. Blizzard has given us the information that Space Hulk: Deathwing, the 'Space Marine' Expansion for Warhammer 40,000: Space Hulk, will be available from August 28th. The addition of Space Marines brings Warhammer 40,000 into the Age of the Dark Millennium, which, as with the rest of the Warhammer 40,000 universe, is a future where Humanity is a dying race, fighting against an alien horde bent on destroying the planet. Like Space Hulk, the expansion is entirely playable in the campaign mode, but players will have the option to play for free, at the end of which, the game will ask them whether or not they're having it. The Space Marine chapter features all new weapons, perks, new units, abilities, and battlefields, with the single player campaign focusing on the most powerful of the Space Marines; The Ultramarines. They are the 'Into the Lightning' chapter of the Ultramarines Space Marine Legion, a brotherhood of super-soldiers who are the protectors and chief engineers of the Ultramarines Traitorius. Space Hulk: Deathwing is $14.99. For more information, and to purchase the expansion online, visit www.SpaceHulk.com. What is

FIVE is a darker reimagining of the story of David, told through the pages of the comic book bible, now given a new life in the only comic book RPG you have ever needed to play. Fate and fortune will play out in the pages of the comic, all while you fight the Demons of Hell with your sword and your wits. Make every decision count as you carve out your own path to help restore God's favor. Make sense of the conflicting choices before you as you close the gateway between life and death, and claim your destiny. Key Features: Action-RPG meets comic book in an unassuming comic book RPG. Play Your way. Make decisions, rise to challenges. But beware! You are not the hero of this story, but simply a player that will shape the world as you play. Extremely replayable, no two games will be the same. Make the right choices and the story will play out differently, each time. Create your own character with a powerful build-you-up system. Over 20 levels of content, explore the biblical landscape of David's story in one of the most detailed comic books in history. Beautiful comic panels make it the perfect companion for bedtime reading. Easy to get into, but with depth that will keep

Active Racer The Armchair Racer (originally known as the Armchair Racer Active Racer) is a single-seat, single-place off-road racing aircraft designed by Hartzell Industries and produced by United Aeromarine, Inc., a company that describes itself as a "manufacturer of hydrofoils, high performance parachutes, composite manufacturing, and H-7 aircraft components." Since its introduction, one of the most advanced multicopters to ever be built has been praised for its performance capability. Its design features are impressive, with three independent shafts that transmit power through a gearbox, and alternately independently powered or "bladed", by the use of dedicated drive motors. The aircraft's maximum speed is 170 knots, and it has an endurance of over 100 hours, and in its default flight configuration, is capable of with a air speed. It is used for sport parachuting. Design and development The Armchair Racer was originally designed in the early 1990s, before any development by United Aeromarine, but Hartzell "recognised a market for a water-based, man-carrying aircraft that addresses current limitations in seaplanes" and proceeded to design it and license-build the aircraft from United Aeromarine. The Armchair Racer was therefore conceived as a high-performance sailplane that could operate through the air and on the water. It is approximately in length and both self-guided under wind power, and manually taken off a swim platform as an amphibian. It is also capable of carrying a swimmer or diver, and is designed to be raised to with an additional fuel tank. The armchair racer has flown at a maximum speed of on three occasions, with an average takeoff weight of. It features a clean, modern design, with nearly all of its systems installed in three hatches provided in the front leading edge. The air-cooled HKS engine provides a cruise speed of and a ceiling of at ; it also produces on one takeoff. A low profile and a 20° forward sweep is provided through the use of a tapering nacelle and fuselage. All of these features, and especially the forward sweep, were designed to reduce drag. A two-bladed "power screw" is driven by the main shaft and transmits power through a reduction ratio of 4.5:1. The reduction ratio means that there is no gearing directly between
