[...] The music has been composed by Hikobune and is available on iTunes. [Ed. Note: I sent Torque and Hikobune a bunch of questions about their concept, writing, production, the music, etc. They responded to all the questions, and a lot more, and I can't wait for people to get their hands on the game. I love it when art and music mixes with storytelling, and it's an amazing combination.] [Ozzie is innocent until proven guilty. In fact, he's innocent even before that. He is guilty. The only thing he has in common with a monkey is that he's large and hairy. Nobody's going to drag him by the tail and dump him in a zoo. - Jack Handy]Q: What is new in the win 10 upgrade program? I am replacing an XP machine with Win 7 and 10. I am trying to get the Win 10 upgrade program started so that I don't have to do a full install. I have tried getting the download from Microsoft.com and running it off a USB drive, but it doesn't seem to have the capability to start from a USB drive. I am trying to get the x86 version of the upgrade. How can I do this? A: You can create an Upgrade Assistant from the Windows 10 installation DVD. Here is a guide on how to do so. In order to create the USB Upgrade Assistant, you'll need Windows 10 Retail ISO (x86) ISO. If you do not have this, you can download it from here. (You'll need an offline PC for this if you don't have it on the same network as the laptop you're trying to upgrade.) Once you have the Windows 10 ISO, here's how you can create a USB Upgrade Assistant. Insert the Windows 10 ISO into the computer you want to upgrade Open an elevated PowerShell prompt Run the Upgrade-Win10 Assistant.exe You will then be asked to select a language and be guided through a bunch of installation steps. Once all of that is done, you will reboot and you should be good to go. /* * Licensed to the Apache Software Foundation (ASF) under one or more * contributor license agreements. BEIJING (Reuters) - China offered Pakistan a $20 billion, 60-year concession on gas supplies, saying it had brought its own customers under control, state news agency Xinhua reported on Sunday. China's Prime Minister Li Keqiang gave a special one-day briefing to Pakistani politicians, according to the report, as China's relations with President Barack Obama's administration become strained over a strategic waterway dispute and U.S. sanctions on China over cyber attacks. Pakistan, which is already Asia's No. 2 supplier of natural gas, a rarity among its largely impoverished, landlocked neighbours, was among the countries ordered by Obama in June to reduce military aid and cancel projects funded with U.S. aid funds. Pakistan is a key ally of the United States in the war on Islamist militants in neighbouring Afghanistan. China, Asia's biggest supplier of natural gas, announced last month it would cut domestic supplies to Pakistan from April, accusing it of renegeing on deals and disrupting supply networks. Pakistan denies the accusations. On Sunday, Xinhua did not say why it was switching on the offer on Monday or when it would enter into force. But it said China had improved its "domestic control" over gas supplies, and that the offer was the longest one on record between the countries. Xinhua said the offer would impose no import duties or buybacks on gas and that it offered "big picture thinking" and a long-term, secure future. On Saturday, Chinese Premier Li Keqiang arrived in Islamabad for meetings with Pakistani Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif. Last Wednesday, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry arrived in Islamabad for talks on a deal to have Pakistan reopen a U.S. supply route to Afghanistan that is important for the flow of supplies of economic aid. China, which is building the "western route" across Pakistan to bring natural gas to markets in Europe, wants a quick resolution to the dispute over the $4.5 billion, 1400 km-long, pipeline project. Washington fears it is a route the Islamist militants who have been fighting NATO forces in Afghanistan could use to infiltrate the nuclear-armed state. The time has finally arrived! The second season of Altered Carbon has arrived. On Twitter, I posted this quote from the 2

Br(3)(+) ionic radius in the bulk solid leads to a shorter path length for dissociation, is reported. The shortest path is found for dissolution of 3,5-dihydroxy-1,2,4-benzenetricarboxylate (3,5-DHOBTC) in gaseous QAS. An NMR spectroscopy study has revealed that the anthracene ring is more close to benzene ring by 1.49 Å in the gaseous QAS. In case of crown ether formation, the shortest path was found for 4,7-dihydroxy-1,8-naphthalenetetraone (4,7-DHNATT) in which the path length is closer to 1.19 Å. The decreased dissociation path length on conversion of 3,5-DHOBTC into 3,5
