Kasper, 250 Minn. 257, 83 N.W.2d 237 (1957); State v. Maloney, 187 Minn. 194, 244 N.W. 869 (1932); Hughes v. State, 273 Minn. 47, 139 N.W.2d 64 (1965). Defendant also contends that the trial court erred in failing to instruct the jury that "any number of witnesses are only estimated witnesses and are allowed to express an opinion on a question where the evidence itself is vague." Such an instruction is proper only in cases where the evidence permits the jury to determine whether or not the witness was telling the truth.

See, State v. Kasper, supra; State v. Hill, supra. Here, the evidence was too circumstantial and susceptible of too many interpretations to allow the jury to determine whether the witnesses were telling the truth. Thus, no need exists for an additional instruction. 4. The court had the discretion to permit the state to reopen to examine the defendant's character witnesses about one character trait the witnesses had testified they did not know but would like to know. On a trial of an issue of defendant's character, the character of the defendant may be inquired into by cross-examination, and the state may also by evidence of its own elicit rebuttal testimony regarding the same subject. State v. Wright, 235 Minn. 282, 50 N.W.2d 241 (1951). But the state may not reopen the examination of such witnesses unless a character trait material to the issue is left open by the defense or by the state during the direct examination of the witnesses. State v. Harrington, 236 Minn. 405, 53 N.W.2d 586 (1952). Here the defendant testified that he was an honest, truthful, and law-abiding person, and that he had never been convicted of any crime. Thus, the state had no proper purpose in renewing its cross-examination of the defendant's character witnesses. 5. Allowing the state to read to the jury the entire transcript of the defendant's confession was not error since the jurors could read the transcript themselves, and thus no harm was done. Reversible error is not presumed from the mere fact that
