Cracking Adobe Photoshop is a bit more involved, but it can be done. First, you'll need to download a program called a keygen. This is a program that will generate a valid serial number for you, so that you can activate the full version of the software without having to pay for it. After the keygen is downloaded, run it and generate a valid serial number. Then, launch Adobe Photoshop and enter the serial number. You should now have a fully functional version of the software. Just remember, cracking software is illegal and punishable by law, so use it at your own risk.

The Photoshop developer support site informs me that this upgrade is available to all users of the Creative Suite 6, and not just my CS6 trial version. That said, Adobe's marketing materials suggest that it won't be available until the end of 2011, which seems like a long time to wait for a release that most users won't ever use. Save a location for jogging in your GPS, set the alarm, put up your umbrella, and run, run, run: starting a new photo is the most overwhelming part of all digital photo taking. Take control by downloading the latest update, Photoshop CS6, for Mac and Windows. It's already making a splash. Version 5.1 of Adobe Camera Raw has numerous changes under the hood, and Version 5.2 adds a couple of performance improvements and a new Noise reduction algorithm. The image retouching and organization tools have been streamlined, and the all-encompassing panel is now more configurable. There was definitely a significant performance increase with the latest updates. Tool performance is much better. And I didn't notice that compression/compression artifacts in my output jpegs was worse. It just seemed to be better. The camera raw control panel is quite usable now.

I was able to get the camera raw controls working much better with the latest updates. Even features in the post editing tab also work now.

I'm now uploading to the web for the first time.

I will definitely keep you posted.

Yes - it is the only program that I use for photo editing. I love my D800 with the L camera body and kit. It feels like a perfect combination for me.

Thanks for testing it out. Your review will be helpful for future buyers.

With respect to your review about JPEG compression being worse? I sampled very different photos. If I was missing certain effects like doing a curve adjustment, I did have to turn off the JPEG compression. I just tried it the other day. Worked fine here.

Regards, John

As the creative director of a leading organization focused on meeting the needs of the creative community, John Plueger, president and CTO of Adobe, has seen firsthand the richness of content creation today. He believes that the next evolution in creative content will transform our lives. He recalls the excitement when Microsoft introduced the first Office package for personal computers. "It was the beginning of the new productivity and an innovation in how we create. We've seen similar transformational shifts as a result of the explosion in mobility and apps like Instagram. We look for ways to reimagine how professionals and creators are able to seize upon the new possibilities of mobile devices, with the power of the tools they already use: Photoshop. "For many users, a smartphone is the computer they turn to in order to make their ideas tangible in the digital world," said Plueger. "They expect to have the same creative control and the unparalleled advantages of Photoshop available to them wherever they are. "This notion isn't limited to social media. Anyone who has engaged with a new medium, whether it's movie trailers or watching video, knows the thrill of turning their initial ideas into a seamless, multi-media experience. The capability of Photoshop to create an entire visual canvas and cross media storytelling is what is going to make the next wave in content creation as compelling as it is imaginative." "Now we get the chance to join the conversation in ways we never thought possible," said Plueger. "By delivering the power of Photoshop to the devices people use to express their ideas and innovate with, we empower people to exceed their digital capabilities.
