16-year-old Kaia Gerber is once again demonstrating to the fans how to rest, writes the Chronicle.Info with reference to TSN. The model is.). As part of this grant, we have successfully developed and validated a novel cell-based platelet activation assay, which employs human platelets and a multimyelocytic cell line as a model system for platelet activation. Our assay is unique in that (i) it exploits multi-cytic cell lines (which express endogenous GPCRs) as a model to detect platelet agonist-induced platelet activation, (ii) we have demonstrated that the assay is not receptor-specific, as the model system detects platelet activation induced by both GPIIb/IIIa and GPIb specific agonists, (iii) the assay measures platelet aggregation and increases in plasma-determined beta-thromboglobulin levels, (iv) the assay is compatible with ultra-low sample volumes, (v) the assay is rapid (≤ 8 hr), robust (≥ 12 hrs), and highly reproducible ($\leq 10\%$ CV), (vi) the protocol is simple to perform, robust, and with minimal hands on time (A sex-specific comorbidity in Turner syndrome is not maternal age-related. The objective of this study is to further characterize the comorbidity pattern in Turner syndrome (TS). Congenital anomalies are a common feature in TS. It has been suggested that a higher prevalence of osteoporosis in this population may be related to maternal age. A total of 133 patients with TS from referral centers were included. Osteoporosis and recurrent spontaneous abortions (RSA) were assessed in a subset of 100 patients. The most prevalent craniofacial dysmorphic features were hypertelorism, agnathia and cleft lip/palate. Other common features were webbed neck and widely spaced nipples. Hypertelorism was more common in patients with a diagnosis of Turner mosaicism, whereas webbed neck was more common in patients with karyotype 45, XO. Only 22 patients presented
